Blue Ribbon Commission on Children in Foster Care to Release Final Recommendations

Supreme Court Justice Carlos R. Moreno to Present Findings At August 15 Judicial Council Meeting

The California Blue Ribbon Commission on Children in Foster Care is presenting its final recommendations to the Judicial Council at its August 15 public business meeting in San Francisco. Commission Chair and Supreme Court Associate Justice Carlos R. Moreno will submit the recommendations and ask the Judicial Council to take action on what are expected to be sweeping reforms of the state's juvenile dependency court system.

Appointed by Chief Justice Ronald M. George, the commission is concluding its two-year review of the courts' role in foster care. The commission has identified a court and child welfare system that is plagued by staggering caseloads, insufficient and rushed hearings, lack of adequate information for judges to make informed decisions, and other barriers that prevent foster youth and their families from having an opportunity to participate meaningfully in proceedings that affect their lives, including where and with whom children will live.
